069 SNOWMAN, the character, in the treasure's drawing

From Laura, 11/5/2026: "069 SNOWMAN (the character) -> the SAME drawing as the finished Snowman treasure (T 093). Yes, match exactly." The character now carries the treasure's finished drawing, the band over his head and all, everywhere he shows. It is live in client v30.29.

The two tiles you sent, and the character now

Left: tile 069 on the character sheet today (the faint line over his head). Middle: the treasure T 093, the drawing you approved. Right: the character as the game draws him now: the treasure's drawing itself, the band and all, standing exactly where the old one stood.

BEFORE: 069 SNOWMAN on the sheet

The treasure T 093 (approved)

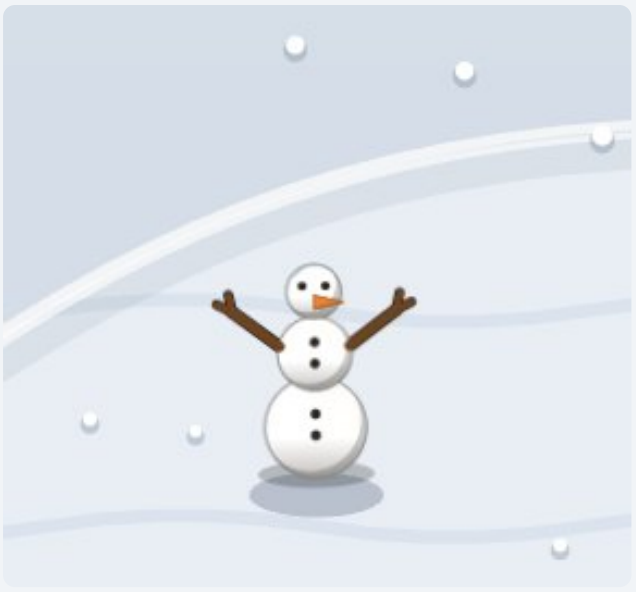

AFTER: the character, as the game draws him

Why they had parted

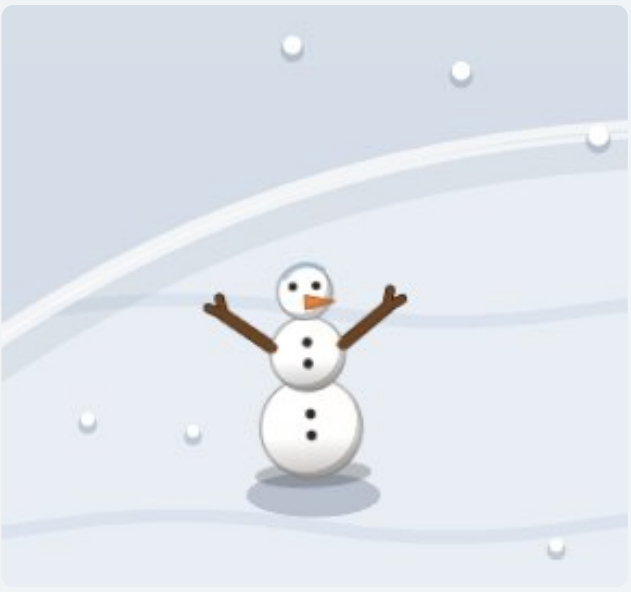

The character and the treasure were always one drawing in the game. The sheet's pass (and the game's baked copy of it) is run on the character at full size and on the treasure at three quarters inside its card frame, and its thin-line rule reads the band over the head differently: on the character it was thinned to a faint line, on the treasure it kept its full stroke. So the band showed on the treasure only. Now the character carries the treasure's finished drawing outright, so nothing can part them again.

The fight on Yeti Park, rung 2

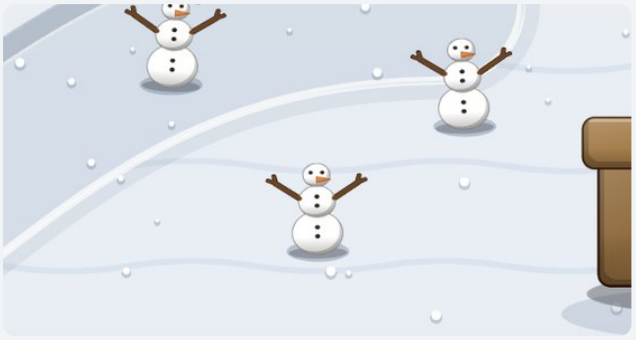

SNOWBALL PRACTICE, where the pitchers first stand. He stands on the old feet at the old size, so his hop, his throw and every seat hold.

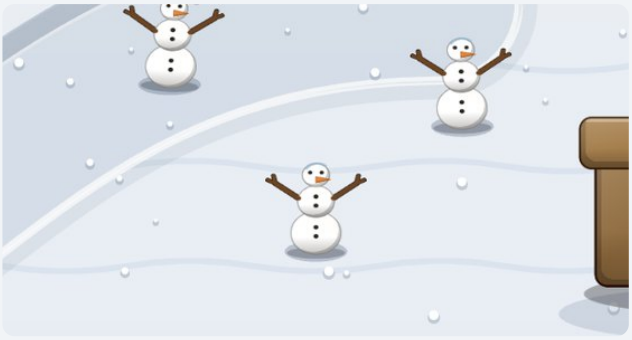

BEFORE (the game today)

AFTER (the treasure's drawing)

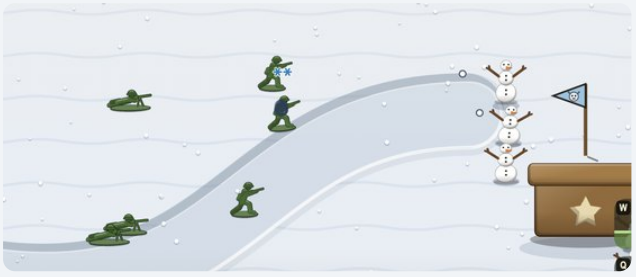

BEFORE (the game today): three of them

AFTER (the treasure's drawing): three of them

The pitchers at work

The rung's own first wave against six men, a snowball in the air.

BEFORE (the game today)

AFTER (the treasure's drawing)

The toy on the bedroom shelf

The Yeti Park model of him (the treasure as a toy in the room), as the room's own painter draws him at his seat: the same drawing; his tap, his sparkle and his head's wobble are as they were.

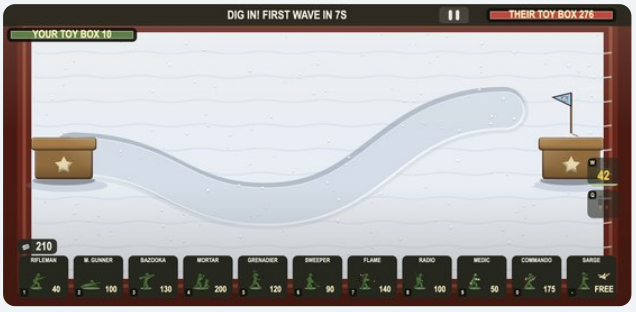

BEFORE (the game today)

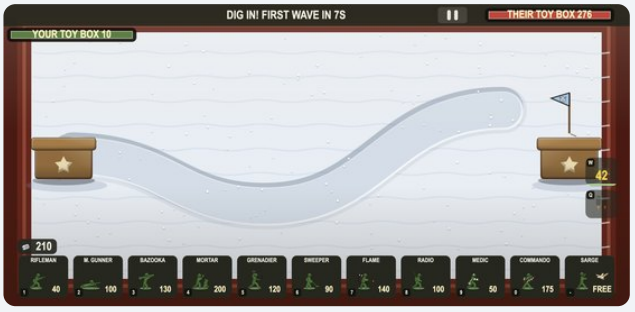

AFTER (the treasure's drawing)

The whole rung

The first seconds of rung 2 on the Winter Field's snow.

BEFORE (the game today)

AFTER (the treasure's drawing)

The treasure keeps its card; the giant and the sergeant keep theirs

The chest's card of The Snowman is the same picture as before (it was the source). THE GIANT SNOWMAN and SGT. SNOW are their own characters on the sheet and keep today's drawing; say the word and they take the band too.

The treasure's card (unchanged)

THE GIANT SNOWMAN (unchanged)

SGT. SNOW (unchanged)

The switch

On one device, `?snw=0` at the end of the game's address shows the snowman as he was before this card, and `?snw=1` brings the new drawing back. Nothing else in the game changed: no number of his fights, no word, no save.

Questions for you

- The giant and the sergeant. THE GIANT SNOWMAN and SGT. SNOW are their own tiles on the sheet and keep today's drawing. Say the word and they wear the band too.
- The little snowmen. The five that burst out of the Giant Snowman are 069's row, so they wear the new drawing. Right?
- The sheet. Tile 069 and the treasure's tile now read one drawing; the sheet's next refresh shows it under UPDATED IN. Nothing else to tick.

Checked in Chrome and in WebKit (the iPhone's engine): 32 of 32 checks in each, and 32 of 32 on the lighter copy the sites serve. The drawing in the game is the chest's own baked picture of the treasure, byte for byte, so the two can never part again.